Bob Silverstein is a photographer whose work focuses on landscape and architectural subjects. In addition, as a volunteer with food assistance organizations in Virginia and New Haven, he has photographed many charity events and clients receiving food services. Though Bob is mostly self-taught, he enjoys going to photography workshops to gain additional knowledge and inspiration.

Born and raised in Peekskill, NY, Bob moved to New York City after college and developed his love of photography, inspired by the many interesting visual subjects found in a great city. After several years in New York, Bob relocated to the Virginia suburbs of Washington, DC, married, reared a family, and had a rewarding career in information technology, retiring in 2014. He moved to New Haven in 2016 to be close to his grandchildren.
